Australia's Lot Feeding Specialist, Mort & Co have opened the 2019 Graduate Program application process, identifying people with ambitions for a future leadership role within our business.

We are offering an accelerated learning platform to gain exposure to total feedlot operations over a period of twelve months.

Reporting to the Feedlot Manager you will also work closely with and assist all operational supervisors and their team to learn:

Feedlot Production:

- Rotational feedlot duties including a high level of operational activity and supplementary administrative functions.

Quality Assurance:

- Learn all aspects of sectional Quality Assurance procedures.
- Actively participate and assist with internal and procedural compliance including auditing and accurate data collection.

Research and Development:

- To develop an advanced knowledge base and practical skill in the design, implementation and analysis of research and development projects across all sections.
- To comply with requirements of research governance and evidence-based practice.

We are looking for people who have:

A high level of determination and drive, strong communication skills with an interest in learning and working within various operational levels. Intermediate computer literacy, with a high level of organisation and time management skills, who can work autonomously or in a team.

We look forward to hearing from enthusiastic, passionate people who want a career in feedlotting.

Applications open now for 2019 Graduate Program.
